Gabriela Forsman practices in the areas of competition law, anti-corruption, and compliance, representing clients in administrative and judicial proceedings. She advises clients in internal investigations, participates in the negotiation of cooperation agreements with public authorities, including the Administrative Council for Economic Defense (Cade), the Public Prosecutor's Office, and the Office of the Comptroller General (CGU), and handles merger notification and challenges before Cade. Gabriela also advises on the review of commercial practices adopted by companies and associations and on the development of compliance programs. Throughout her professional career, she has worked at law firms in Japan and the United States in the areas of competition and corporate law, as well as in initiatives focused on the protection of human rights. She currently holds leadership positions in national committees related to competition law and corporate integrity.
